TRANSCRIPT EXPLANATION

The University of Wisconsin-Green Bay opened for classes in September of 1968 with a four-year campus located in Green Bay and two-year campuses at Manitowoc, Marinette, and Menasha (Fox Valley). The first graduating class received degrees in June of 1970. UW-Green Bay continued to operate on a multi-campus basis until June of 1972 when the two-year campuses were returned to the UW Colleges.

Computer-printed transcripts were first utilized during the fall semester of 1978-79. Therefore, students who were enrolled both before and after that term will have transcripts in two differing formats.

The record prior to fall 1978 shows Semester I as the fall semester (September through December) but includes credits earned during the January interim if the student enrolled in January. January interim was recorded as fall semester even though the student may not have been enrolled in regular fall semester classes. The January interim was discontinued after January 1993. Semester II was the spring semester (mid-January through mid-May).

In fall 2010, a January interim was reinstated. It appears on the transcript as part of the fall semester courses. The fall semester spans September to mid-January and the spring semester spans mid-January to mid-May. Summer semester spans mid-May through mid-August in a given academic year.
